Impact of Volunteering

A total of 92,625,736 euros worth of organized volunteer work was carried out in 2022, which undoubtedly shows the great contribution of volunteer work to general social welfare in the Republic of Slovenia. On the other hand, the aim of the study Being a volunteer Changes you; The effects of volunteering on the volunteer and the role of mentorship was to investigate positive and negative effects of volunteering on volunteers. They wanted to find out which changes volunteers perceive in their lives as consequences of volunteering, and if volunteers who had a mentor perceive more positive change than those without one. A total of 721 volunteers responded. The results show that on average volunteers perceived positive changes more often than negative ones. Moreover, more positive changes were reported in the group of volunteers who had a mentor. Almost every volunteer reported that they felt more useful because of volunteering. More than 80 % reported positive changes with regard to experiencing positive emotions, along with greater satisfaction with their lives and social networks.

Research in the Field of Volunteering

The Joint Report on Volunteering for 2022 reveals that Slovenian volunteers, both within organizations and public institutions, contribute over nine million hours of volunteer work. This voluntary effort is valued at more than 92 million euros for social welfare. Additionally, there are 2,341 registered volunteer organizations in Slovenia. The report compiles data on volunteer work, including the number of agreements made, hours volunteered, and the estimated social welfare contribution. It also highlights that voluntary work is done without payment or material benefits, purely for the benefit of others or the community.

Financial Support for the Development of Volunteering in Slovenia

The Slovenian Network of Volunteer Organizations received funding from the Ministry of Public Administration for supporting volunteering. Their program, The Slovenian Philanthropy program*, aims to enhance volunteer organizations' capacities for quality volunteering, organizational development, and knowledge sharing. They achieve this through training, counseling, mentoring, and information dissemination to NGOs and organizations with volunteer programs, helping to build their capabilities. They also focus on connecting organizations and providing guidance on volunteering development.

National award and recognitions for volunteering

Annually, the Committee of the Republic of Slovenia awards national recognition for volunteering to deserving volunteers and organizations. These awards, such as "Volunteering-Friendly Municipality," "Best Volunteer in Public Administration," "Best Mentor of Volunteers," "Heroes of Our Time," and "Best Volunteer Story," are presented by the President of Slovenia at a special ceremony.
